++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cold and wintry.

Today:
A band of rain, sleet and snow moving southwards across England and Wales. Brighter skies for Northern Ireland and Scotland with snow showers affecting the far northeast. Cold.

Tonight:
Patchy rain, sleet and snow clearing southern parts. Clear skies for many with a widespread frost, severe in places. Turning windy in northwest Scotland with snow, followed by rain, later.

Saturday:
Low cloud in the south at first else plenty of sunshine, but cold. Cloudier across Scotland and Northern Ireland with patchy rain, and some brief snow, before slowly turning milder.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Remaining mostly dry in the south and gradually becoming less cold. Increasingly unsettled in the north with rain and hill snow at times, heaviest in the northwest.
